Seek Medical Attention!

When you're in an accident, your body will release adrenaline to help protect you. This adrenaline can mask injuries for a time. That's why it's important to seek medical care as soon as possible if you might be hurt. Our best advice is to listen to your body. Sometimes, a trip to the emergency room is necessary. If you're in pain after the accident, it's best to get looked at as soon as possible. You may also see your primary care physician or visit an urgent care clinic without insurance if you need medical attention.
