If it is your situation, you might be entitled to the following types of damages:

Medical Costs

In a motorcycle accident, even if you've invested in comprehensive health insurance with generous limits, that doesn't always mean it will cover your medical expenses. Fortunately, you will be able to recoup some of the expenses associated with treating your condition when properly evaluated and supported by good attorneys in your case.

Lost Income

If you lost any wages during your recovery from an accident, be sure to keep accurate records. Being able to present documentation of lost earnings will be necessary if you decide to seek restitution in Georgia as a result of the accident. It is also plausible that, due to the collision, you are no longer able to work or have an impaired ability to earn what you were earning before the accident. If this happens, it's important to assess the potential impact on your income.

Replacement Services

Do you need someone else to help with childcare or do housework for you due to your disability caused by injuries? In that case, you may seek compensation for any related costs. Make sure you keep all pertinent paperwork such as receipts, estimates, and invoices in a safe place as this will be crucial in claiming the expenses associated with this.

Non-Financial Damage

Georgia law guarantees that serious injuries can affect your physical and emotional well-being, as well as your financial well-being, accordingly, in addition to the losses listed above, accident victims have the right to seek compensation for so-called non-damage economic, they can include emotional distress, pain, and suffering, as well as loss of pleasure.

You should know that you will need to provide a lot of evidence to demonstrate how your condition has affected your everyday life; however, there are no receipts or invoices for the intangible effects of his injuries. To give others an idea of how you have suffered mentally and physically since the shipwreck, your attorney may use a combination of your journal entries, colleagues' statements, and psychiatric evaluations.
